

FOR COACHES AND CLUB MANAGERS

Everything off the coach's plate.

TeamLoop puts your roster, schedule, messaging, permission slips, volunteers and team money in one place, on the web and in a real iOS and Android app. So the coaching part can go back to being the job.

What TeamLoop replaces

Most teams run on five or six tools that do not talk to each other. Every one of them is a place for something to get lost.

- The group text thread

Muted by half the parents. No history, no way to reach only the parents, and no idea who actually read it.

- A shared spreadsheet

One person owns it. It is out of date the moment a player joins or a game moves.

- Paper permission slips

Chased at practice, lost in a bag, and impossible to prove were ever signed.

- A separate payment app

No link between who paid and who is on the roster.

- A club website nobody can edit

Updating a game time means emailing whoever built it.

- A separate signup form

A form feeding a spreadsheet, then typed into the roster by hand, with the typos that come with it.

- A folder of medical forms

In the trunk of a car, and unreadable at the one moment somebody actually needs it.

Everyone sees the same thing

Coaches, parents and players each get the view that suits them, from the same data.

Built for youth sports specifically

Not a re-skinned business tool. Roles for coaches, parents and players; safety features on every plan; and scoring that already knows how your sport works.

Communication and scheduling

The two things a team does every week, done right.

- Channels that respect who people are

Whole-team, parents-only, or custom channels. Parents never see the players-only chatter, and coaches can post an announcement to every channel at once.

- Direct messages and @mentions

Mentions notify only the people named. Parents and players only ever see coaches in the mention list, never each other's contact details.

- Games with RSVPs

Parents RSVP from the app. Decline reasons tell you why, so you know if it is one absence or half the squad at a school event.

- Practices, including recurring

Set a whole month of Tuesday and Thursday practices in one pass, or run separate sessions for Varsity and JV at the same field with their own times.

- One calendar for the whole season

Games, practices, dinners and anything else you schedule — photo day, banquets, tryouts — in one month view parents see too. Print it as a branded PDF.

- Weather watch

TeamLoop checks the forecast at your actual game and practice locations every 15 minutes and pushes a warning when thunderstorms are coming.

- Attachments that actually open

Photos, video and PDFs in any channel. Documents open in a viewer rather than downloading into a phone's file system where nobody finds them again.

- Write now, send later

Draft the Friday reminder on Tuesday and schedule it. Practice and game notifications are batched so families get one push, not fifteen.

Volunteer fairness

TeamLoop counts how many duties each family has taken, so the same three parents are not carrying the season.

Paperwork, parents and safety

The admin that eats a season, and the protections a youth program has to have.

- Digital permission slips

Parents sign on their phone. Each signature records the name typed, the exact time in UTC, and the IP address it came from, so the record stands up if it is ever questioned.

- Medical and allergy information

On every plan including the free one, because it is a safety feature and not an upsell. Coaches get a read-only medical roster; parents keep their own child's details current.

- Registration that fills your roster

Share one link or invite code. Families complete a guided signup, and approved players land on the roster with parents already attached.

- Automatic content moderation

Every message and uploaded image is scanned before it posts. It understands sports language, so 'crush them on Saturday' is fine, while genuine harassment is stopped.

- Roles and per-coach permissions

Assistant coaches can be limited to their own group, or given exactly the powers you choose over games, practices, fees or volunteers.

- The right person signs the waiver

An adult player can sign for themselves; a minor's waiver has to go to a parent. TeamLoop works out which applies and asks the correct person.

- Player accounts without the worry

Players join with a one-time code you issue, so nobody signs up as one of your players uninvited. Under-13 signups are blocked outright.

Child safety is not a paid feature

Message and image moderation, medical records and the signature audit trail are on every plan, including Starter.

Money, without the shoebox

Collect dues, invoice families and run a fundraiser without a separate app or a treasurer's spreadsheet.

- Team fees, straight to your account

Payments go directly to the team's own Stripe account. TeamLoop takes no cut at all. You pay only Stripe's standard processing fee, exactly as you would anywhere else.

- Payment plans

Split any fee into 2 to 6 monthly installments so families are not asked for the whole season up front.

- Invoices and balances

Send an invoice, see at a glance who has paid and who has not, and edit it afterwards if something changes.

- Check and cash tracking

Not everything arrives online. Record deposits against a family so one page shows the true balance.

- Fundraisers with player share links

Each player gets their own link to send to family. Donations land in the team's account, and the donor can choose to cover the processing fee.

- Sponsor a team

A local business or a grandparent can pay for a team's subscription, with the coach approving before anything is charged.

- Tied to the roster, not a spreadsheet

Every fee, payment and deposit hangs off a real player and a real family, so 'who still owes' is a page you glance at rather than an evening you lose.

0% platform fee, in plain English

If a family pays $240, the team receives $240 minus only what Stripe charges to process the card. TeamLoop never takes a percentage of your team's money.

For clubs and multi-team programs

One login across every team you run.

- Switch teams without signing out

A director moves between teams from the top bar. Coaches who help with two squads see both, and each team keeps its own roster, schedule and channels.

- A real club website, built in

Pages, schedules, rosters, coach profiles and sponsors, published on your own domain. Change a game time once and the public site updates with it.

- Online registration on your site

The same signup wizard used by the invite link, embedded on your public site, feeding straight into the right team and season.

- Seasons

Everything lives inside a season. Roll into next year without losing history, and choose which season the public site shows.

- Activity log

An owner-level record of who changed what and when, across the whole organization.

- Bring your roster with you

Import players and parents from a spreadsheet. TeamLoop matches the column names for you and catches duplicates before they land.

- And take it back out

Export any roster to CSV, choosing the columns you need, for the league registration form or the end-of-season awards list.

AI that does the busywork

Not a robot coach. A faster way through the writing and admin around coaching.

● Practice planner

Say what you want to work on and how long you have. Get a structured plan with timings and drills, which you can rate so the suggestions improve.

● Message and recap drafts

A first draft of the game announcement or the post-game recap, in seconds. You edit and send. Nothing posts on its own.

● Catch-up summaries

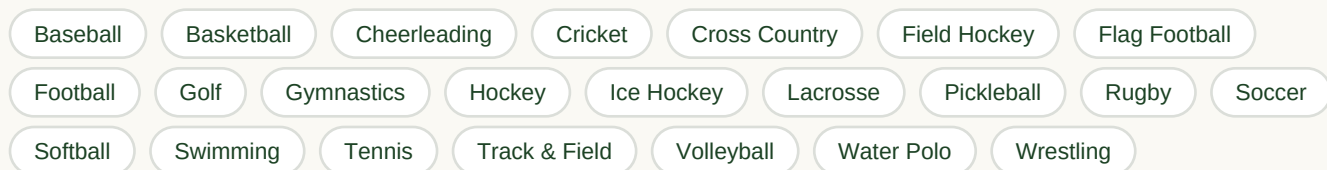

Came back from a week away to 200 messages? Get the gist of a channel without reading all of it.

It already knows your sport

Scoring, periods and the words on screen change to match. Wrestling shows dual meets and weight classes; swimming shows meets and swimmers; tennis shows match lines.

Play designer and playbook

Draw plays on a real field, share them with players, and drop one straight into a message. Pro and above.

Film room

Upload game film, build clip playlists with coach notes — and see who watched, and how much. Pro and above.

How far that goes

Wrestling

A note on how plans are counted

Club and Club+ are priced per organization, not per team. A five-team club on Club pays $25 a month in total. Team fee collection and fundraising carry no TeamLoop percentage on any plan; you pay only Stripe's processing rate.
